

Stocklinch 3 Day Weather Forecast

SUNDAY

As you'll see on the air pressure map below, low pressure is expected to be often in charge during Sunday, so although there are sure to be some drier spells, yes dry spells, the day overall is expected to be wetter than normal in all parts, with temperatures a touch cooler than the norm. So, it's going to be wet and cold.

MONDAY

Monday is expected to see a slightly different pattern emerging in the village with high pressure edging closer to the north of the village, keeping rain amounts close to or below normal here, but with pressure still expected to be lower than average further south of the village, rainfall amounts may well be above the seasonal average.

Temperatures are currently forecast to be close to or slightly below normal levels. So, it's going to be wet and cold.

TUESDAY

We're getting some way ahead at this point of the forecast, so forecast does drop away some way...

At this point in time Tuesday is expected to be fairly average with temperatures close to or perhaps a tiny bit above average or could be a tiny bit below average or not.

Rainfall is expected to be close to average for many areas with eastern parts of the Village having the best chance being a little drier than the rest.

So, it could be wet and cold, for a change.
